WIRE BREAK TIES UP TRAM LINE

Several Hundred Feet Down on Montville Line—Hundreds Returning from Ocean Beach are Stalled in New London—Last Car Gets Here Shortly After 2 O'clock This Morning.

The Connecticut company found trouble on Wednesday for just as the hundreds of Norwich people on the Beach day celebration at Ocean Beach, New London, began to make their way homeward the trolley, which was on the Montville line, came to a sudden stop. As a result of the accident, a thousand or more people were waiting at 10 o'clock in the New London parade for an opportunity to get home, and the cars from Ocean Beach were adding to the number constantly. Instead of finding a string of extra cars ready to start, the trolley was stalled with out delay, the early comers found things tied up. When the cars were sent out, so much of a crowd was left that about 300 persons had the opportunity of getting up to Norwich on the second section of the boat train, arriving in this city shortly after 2 o'clock.

Motorman Walter Burdick started out from New London on the regular half hour Montville car on time at 9:15 with an extra car. The extra caused the trouble, for as it was going down the beach, the trolley fell on the trolley line and pulled down the overhead wire. The trolley was stalled on the whole line as far north as Montville, was grounded. The heavy ground threw out the circuit breakers at the New London power house. The trolley plies the current for the line as far as the shut-off in Montville, north of which the trolley line is not connected to the power house. Consequently the whole New London system was also paralyzed until, as soon as possible, the Montville line was cut at the power house. Lines in New London by the switch at Bullard corner.

Inspector R. B. Ladd of this city, who was assisting Inspector Peter Ash in New London in handling the Beach day crowds, went out with Line Foreman Harry Noonan and his men, walking out to where the wire was down, got it up off the track. More of the wire fell as they were working on it, so that in all several pole lengths were down. About 10 o'clock the men had the wire up, removing the ground and once more the power to be turned on.

Four extra cars were at the sand pit at Waterford and these with three others from Norwich were used as transfer cars on the north side of the break and others were sent out from the New London side.

The car leaving New London at 8:45 was at Montville before the break occurred and so reached Norwich on time at 9:30. The trolley was stalled on the Beach and two extra coaches had been attached to the Bar Harbor express and packed full of people, the car from State street was considerably diminished.

Had everything run smoothly the Connecticut company would have had several extra cars besides the four doubled regulars on the Montville line to bring back the Norwich people.

The big crowds that were on the beach this city and vicinity all the morning and afternoon kept the trolley men busy. The four regular cars were all double ended, and as the trolley was in New London, the crowds were smoothly and expeditiously handled.
